

MEMORIES OF THE MET

Considered "uptown" when it opened its doors in 1883, the Metropolitan marked the passage of the theatrical district from the "20 streets" to the 40s and 50s. Here it is as it appeared during the early 1900's. At left is Enrico Caruso in character for role of "Pagliacci."

The great golden curtains of New York's grand old Metropolitan Opera House will ring down for a final time on April 16.

After 83 years of making musical and glamor history, the Met is moving. It opens in September in a brand new building located in the city's Lincoln Center complex.

It's probable that no other opera house, including the famed La Scala, has ever heard such vocal beauty. The luminaries who have raised their voices there are legendary in the annals of opera.

From opening night, on October 22, 1883, when Christine Nilsson and Italo Campanini appeared in Gounod's Faust, the roll of honor has included such names as Sembrich, Lilli Lehmann, the De Reszkes, Calve, Melba, Caruso, Martinelli, Farrar, Gigli, Chaliapin, Jeritza, Ponselle, Flagstad, Mel-choir, Bjoerling and Pons down to the current favorites: Tabaldi, Callas, Tucker, Corelli and Merrill.

It was "home" base for Caruso. Martinelli sang there for 33 seasons. Puccini himself was on hand for the world premier of his La Fanciulla del West.

The old Met was a place where offstage antics sometimes outdid those on stage, where the glitter of the opening night audiences in their opera finest sometimes drew more spectators than the opera itself, where the acoustics were superb, the sight-lines horrible and the facilities for storing sets nonexistent.

Still, with all the disadvantages, there is hardly any person who has been there who doesn't say with nostalgia, "I've been to the Met."

An artist's drawing of opening night, October 22, 1883, showing the performance of Gounod's Faust, as seen from a box in the famed "diamond horseshoe" tier.

Destructive fire of August 7, 1892, left Met a hollow wreck, closing its doors for first of only two times in its history.

Incensed over use of model of John's head and scanty costumes in 1903 version of Salome, upset fans called it "scandalous."

Famed Met Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza, poses in 1931 with newly discovered star Lily Pons.

Headstands and cartwheels, in and out of Met, by 1939 fan.

Tenor star Beniamino Gigli, with headlock on his wrestling instructor, reportedly tossed soprano Mme. Jeritza, right, into the footlights.

To amusement of her escort, this socialite added to Met's history of hijinks with leav showing in 1947

Robber Can't Face Children
DETROIT (AP) — Richard P. Griffin, 41, turned down bail on bank robbery charges in Detroit and told the judge: "I can't go home. I couldn't face my two children."

Griffin, a $7,000-a-year inspector for the Detroit Health Department, had been arrested at his home and charged with robbing three banks of less than $2,000 in the past six months.

Arraigned before Federal Judge Thomas P. Thornton, Griffin chose to go to jail rather than get bail and go home to face Debbie, 10, and Larry 8.

The judge said to him: "You seem like an intelligent person. What happened?"

"Bills began piling up," Griffin replied.

Will Take Bids at Bull Shoals

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Army Engineers said Thursday they would receive bids May 19 on a new roof for the powerhouse at Bull Shoals Dam, a project expected to cost $20,000.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

Youth Asked For It
This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their trouble and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help US!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush-off.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help US! this newspaper.

Always Belittling
Dear Helen: You have probably heard this many times before. But I turn to your column every day to see if my problem has been explained by you. It hasn't exactly.

It is my parents. The constantly belittle me. I don't mean only in private. They do it when there is company visiting. In fact, they seem to do it all the more then.

The idea of running away is my main thought throughout the day, but I know that won't solve things. My parents love me very much — I know it; and I love them very much. I have tried to tell them how it hurts, but they forget I guess. Or else they don't understand.

You see, I am very heavy and my brother is thin and wiry, very small. My folks always say how marvelous he is and that I should have been the boy because of my size. I'm not jealous of him, but somehow I feel so awfully hopeless, being the Big One who is —Belittled.

Dear Belittled: Has it ever occurred to you, honey, that your parents are trying to build your brother UP, not run you down? Their approach is dead wrong and I hope they soon realize it, but often people compensate for a lack (of height and weight in your brother's case) with over-praise.

Another angle — and here again they're so frighteningly wrong — they may discuss your heaviness in front of others so that you'll be "shamed" into reducing. And they make the tal public for still another reason (the same one wives subconsciously use when they criticize their husbands — kiddingly — in the company of mutual friends: they can get their point across without an open clash — you have to sit and take it because you've got on your company manners.

Most people are sometimes guilty of this "open criticism" — and I'm sure you have been too. It's just plain easier to find good-natured fault with someone you care about in front of a third person. Trouble is you don't win even if you avoid a battle, because you leave that person hurt and fuming; and if you do it often, he or she begins to care about you a little less. . . or gives up any hope of ever pleasing you.

If you can get these ideas across to your folks, I'm quite sure "open season" on you will soon end. And THEN you can have some private talks about a workable reducing diet. Good luck! — H.

Is Growing Up Fun?
Dear Helen: Shary, who said it was kinda hard growing up, must be exactly like me. I am almost 16. Last summer was the first time I really dated a boy. I had fun all summer and all during this school year, too, but there are times when I miss being a little girl.

I miss playing jump rope and hop scotch and even having my parents tell me to practice the piano — sounds funny, but it's true. Sure at my age you have lots more privileges, but you also have lots of responsibility. It was simpler, being a little girl.

There are many many advantages to being grown up. People respect what you say and they stop to listen to you and nobody pats you on the head. But I feel sorry for the little 10 and 12-year-old girls who are "going steady" or wearing high heels and nylons already. They miss two good years of hop scotch!

— Another Helen

Dear Helen: Just because you reach 16 doesn't mean you have to stop having fun. Shary. We are three 18-year-olds who still get excited over Christmas. We also cry at sad movies and laugh and giggle when we please. As for being lazy and loafing; who doesn't sometimes? If who doesn't sometime? If Shary stopped having fun because she turned 16, she never really had a good time to start with. Growing up is the best part of being a "silly, giggly, crazy kid" — it isn't the end of fun — It's The Beginning. — Having A Blast

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help YOU. She will also welcome your own amusing experiences. Address Helen Bottel in care of Hope Star.

Life in Arkansas
By J. C. TILLMAN
Associated Press Writer

A huge truck from California chugged its way through Texarkana the other day, towing a large sailboat.

There was no name on the sailboat.

Painted boldly on the hood of the big diesel truck was the name, "Tammy Sue."

When the Easter spirit hit the art department pupils at Paragould Junior High School, they took their feelings out on a Volkswagen.

The pupils painted a bunny rabbit face, complete with carrot in its mouth, and mounted it on the front of the little auto, creating a strange sight for Paragould motorists.

The Pioneer Room of the Jacksonport Courthouse in Jackson County has another addition — a handmade pioneer bed made in the 1830s.

The bed, low in design, simply and sturdily made, was given to the museum by Mrs. Carl Johnston of Batesville. It was made of Arkansas pine and has hand-cut octagon sided posts.

To complete the setting in the room Mrs. W. K. Spilman of Little Rock donated a feather mattress and quilt made about 1845.

When the Craighead County courthouse was torn down in 1933 to clear the site for a new one, the large bronze bell in it was bought by C. C. Robinson. He used the bell, installed in the courthouse tower about 1860, on his farm near bay for many years to tell tenants of work hours.

Over the years the old bell fell into disuse and the wooden structure supporting it became dangerous to children playing in the area.

Thomas Robinson, son of C. C. Robinson, has rebuilt the supports and moved the old bell into a barn to be kept until a suitable place can be found to display it.

In baseball jargon, a Texas leaguer is a fly ball hit far enough to be out of the infielder's reach but not far enough for the outfielder to catch.

Warns About Before Dinner Drinking

By JOHN VINOCUR

NEW YORK (AP) — A cocktail before dinner can relax tensions temporarily, but its long-range effect may be to make the boss, the mortgage and the kids tougher to take than ever, says an expert on alcoholism.

Whether one drink or ten, liquor inevitably calms a man down but then, without exception, sends him above his normal anxiety level, says Dr. Stanley Gitlow of the New York Medical College.

In a speech to the National Council on Alcoholism Wednesday night, Gitlow took issue with physicians who recommend before-meal drinks to soothe the tired and perplexed businessman.

The doctor, who described himself as a "social drinker," called such advice "misguided" and said liquor "cannot be used to dispel a medical need."

"Several rinks or even one," Gitlow said, "are going to make things difficult the next day."

Gitlow said experiments have shown that alcohol's sedative effects reach a peak about two hours after intake. When they begin to wear off, however, alcohol level in the blood remains high and psychomotor activity or anxiety goes up, he said.

"You have the situation," the doctor said, "where a fellow falls asleep easily after having a few drinks, but finds himself up early the next day. The anxiety has outweighed the sedative element."

This uncomfortableness, characterized by irritability and problems in concentration, can extend into the normal man's next working day, Gitlow said.

"The sedative period is short and acute," he said, "while the agitation is long and subtle."

Hodges said "profound decreases" in levels of blood-fats, especially cholesterol, were achieved by giving the diet to some Iowa State Prison volunteers and some University of Iowa students in a six-month test.

The doctor said the spun-fiber diet — not yet commercially available, but one that should be moderate in cost when it is — was prepared by a commercial food-processing firm (General Mills, Inc., of Minneapolis).

Sam Boyce, often mentioned as a possible Democratic gubernatorial candidate, is prosecutor for the 3rd District, which includes Jackson, Independence, Lawrence and Stone counties.

Surburbanites Pose One of the Unsolved Problems of So-Called Great Society

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) —One of the unsolved problems of the "Great Society" is what to do about suburbanites.

At present they don't quite fit into either the government's antipoverty or foreign aid programs, but certainly something needs to be done to help them.

Life is getting too tough for them out there on the farthest rim of civilization.

They fled to the suburbs originally to escape the poisoned air and crowded clutter of the cities. They thought they would find health of body and peace of mind away from the human herd.

But it hasn't worked out that way. Show me a suburbanite and I'll show you an ambulant neurosis, a man overwhelmed by an environment beyond his ability to cope with.

Let us consider Ronald Halfacre, a typical suburbanite. He is a horizontal yo-yo who rides a train five mornings a week to his job in the city, and rides a mortgage-covered cottage in the suburbs that looks like it had been cut out of cardboard by a child with a rusty pair of scissors.

Ronald is 35 and looks 50. His thinning hair is whitening fast, his eyes are feverish, his face twitches, and he smokes four packs of cigarettes a day.

What has made Ronald old before his time are those long weekends in the suburbs. They are simply more than human flesh can bear.

A suburban weekend is an adventure in frenzy, a mixture between a Roman orgy and a basic training course with the U.S. Marines. If you have the idea that suburbanites spend their weekends listening to the birds, forget it. All they hear is the bats in their belfry.

Ronald never stops going from the time he steps off his train Friday night until his weary wife shovels his limp frame aboard the 8:12 express Monday morning.

What does he do? Ronald parties until nearly dawn, then gets up and paints and scrapes walls and plants beans and fights crab grass and asphyxiates himself burning hot dogs in a backyard pit and parties some more and stays up until dawn again and drives the kids to the beach and parties at the Country Club and parties at the neighbors; paints the crab grass and fights the walls, and parties some more, and yackety-yackety-yaks, and before he knows it, Monday dawn is shining and he is lying there in bed sweating and silently screaming.

Multiply his problem 30 million times and you can see why this is a problem that requires government action. Only the government is big enough to deal with it. But unless it does something, American suburbanites probably will go the way of the dodo and the dinosaur.

Ronald's worst fear is that his office may go on a four-day work week. That means he'd have to face a three-day weekend in the suburbs, and he knows that would be the death of him.

SPOTTED—The leopard pattern catches the eye in this new swimsuit shown in New York, but the unique feature is in the design. It's one piece bikini.

Demonstrators Suspend Market
NEW YORK (AP) — Leaflets tossed by anti-Viet Nam war demonstrators onto the floor of the New York Stock Exchange suspended trading for a brief time.

Some 2,500 brokers and exchange employees were on the ground floor 30 feet below the balcony from which the green and white leaflets were tossed Tuesday.

The demonstrators said they belonged to Youth Against War and Fascism, a college group.

Within a few minutes, 11 young demonstrators were taken from the balcony by exchange security police. There were no arrests.

Odds Good for New War on Cancer

By FRANK CAREY

Associated Press Science Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Prospects for a new kind of war on cancer — based on a discovery that malignancies appear to have a "suicidal" tendency — were reported today.

A Johns Hopkins scientist reported evidence suggesting that conventional anticancer weapons like radiation and certain drugs produce their effects — in part at least — by promoting self-destruction of cancer cells.

The same research, he said, also indicates that the way now appears open to using certain common chemicals, such as vitamin A, as helpmates of the conventional anticancer weapons — so as to greatly enhance a cancer's suicidal proneness.

Dr. David Brandes described the research and its potentially important practical possibilities in a report to the 50th convention of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology. He amplified at a news conference.

The scientist, clearly excited by the prospects, gave this account of the research and the background facts:

Cancer cells contain tiny particles called lysosomes, which, in turn, contain enzymes capable of destroying the cells if released.

When the present heavy artillery of the anticancer war — radiation or certain drugs — is brought to bear against the cancer, some of the lysosomes release their enzymes, killing the cells.

But the research also discovered something else: that the conventional weapons, for rea-

Spin-fiber Diet Helps Heart Victims

By FRANK CAREY

AP Science Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Promising results were reported today with a "spun-fiber" diet designed to reduce blood fats under suspicion as contributors to heart attacks.

The diet — made up of predigested soybean protein spun into fibers to give the product a meat-like texture — is designed to give Americans deemed needing it the low-fat properties of the average oriental diet, but one having "the appearance of Western food." The wisp fibers are compacted into tiny morsels, and flavored and colored for serving.

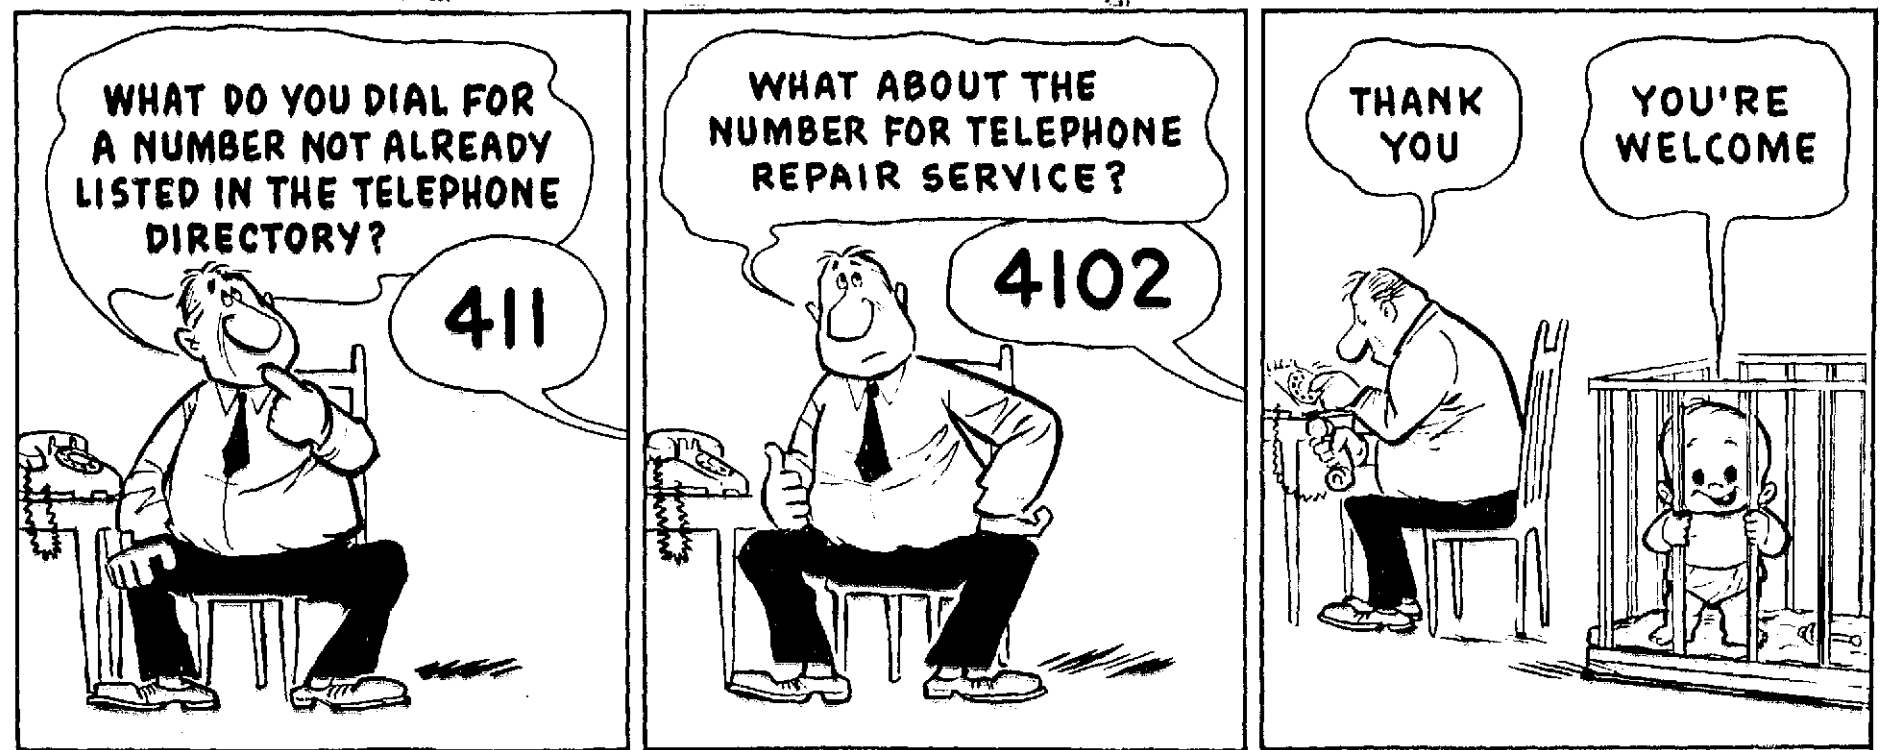

Dr. Robert Hodges of the University of Iowa, who described it at a scientific meeting here, said people in the Orient have long been known to have much lower rates of atherosclerosis — a form of hardening of the arteries believed by many doctors to be the forerunner of heart attacks — than Americans.

And he said that while other factors in addition to dietary ones may aid the orientals in that respect, their low-fat diet is believed to play a significant role.

Hodges indicated at a news conference at the annual convention of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology that the orientals' dietary staple — rice — might serve the same purpose as the new diet. But he said the latter "is far more acceptable to Americans than rice."

Patients treated with the soybean diet eat the usual constituents of the American diet, Hodges said.

But, in addition to make-be-

HEAR THESE WORDS

Worship In Church Every Week

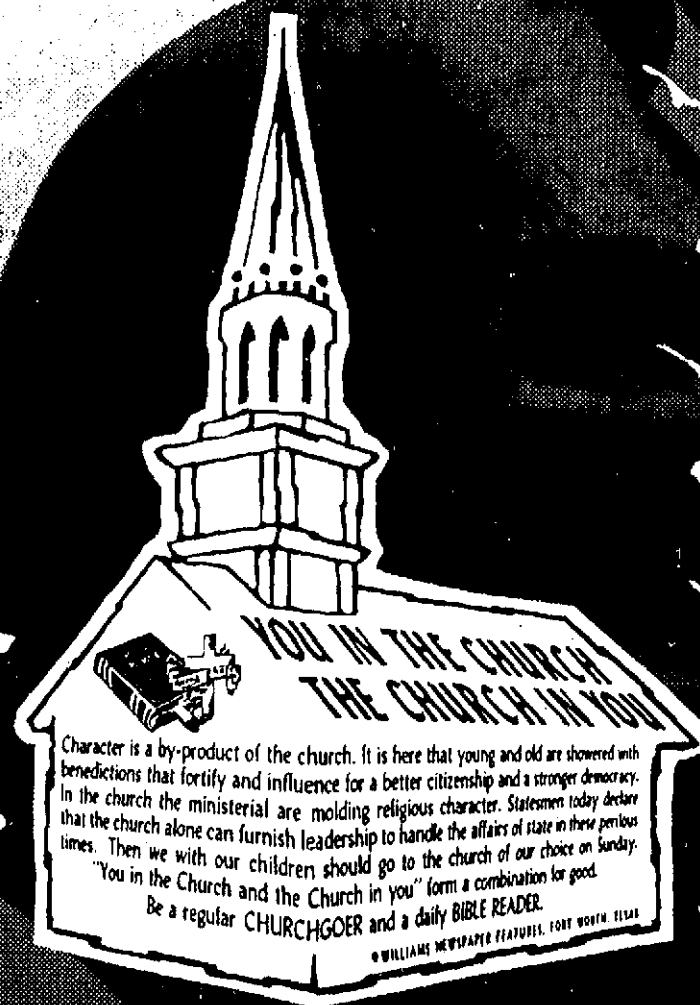

I Offer You....

HAVE

HIM

... the Book of Faith, something to hold to when you realize you cannot make it alone. Grateful women and men have called it a "rock in a weary land, a light in the dark, a refuge in time of storm." God called it His word. It contains the prologue to the true meaning of Valley Forge, the duties and obligations of every American citizen, Counsel and advice to the wise and the foolish. If we cling to the Bible, God will hold us when we ourselves are no longer able to hold the Book. Then take this Book of Faith in both your hands and discover a solution to every problem you have. I offer you the Book and the God your fathers trusted. They were not ashamed nor were they forsaken.

nounced.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

All Is Well If Teeth,
Jaws Grow in Harmony
BY WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The development and eruption of teeth is merely another wondrous process of creation. As early as the second month of pregnancy, when the embryo isn't more than one-half-inch in length, the first signs of tooth development appear. Later, as the jaws form and grow, tooth germs evolve. Within these, teeth develop, first the crowns and then the roots.
Complete root formation does not occur until some months after teeth have come into position in the mouth.

It would be catastrophic for all 20 baby teeth to come out of the jaw at the same time.
The jaws aren't big enough.
So teeth erupt in pairs beginning with the lower central incisors. Then as the child grows, the jaw grows, allowing room for more and more teeth.

Normally, there are spaces between baby incisor teeth, for while the size of these teeth remains constant, jaws continue to grow. Jaw growth is necessary in order to make room for the proper positioning of the larger size permanent teeth.

When jaw growth does not keep pace with tooth eruption, the result is crowding of teeth, sometimes delaying or even preventing their eruption and causing them to become stuck in the jawbone.
These cases usually require orthodontic treatment and possible surgical intervention.

If growth of teeth and jaws takes place in perfect harmony, eruption will follow a well-regulated pattern. And yet, it can be a most individual thing. Consider these two extremes: My daughter didn't get her first tooth until she was 13 months old, recently I was called to the hospital to smooth and round the sharp edges of two lower incisor teeth of a newborn to prevent laceration of opposing gums.

Below is a schedule of normal eruption times of teeth. Any marked deviation from this schedule should be

WIN AT BRIDGE

Proper Signals Produces Set

Many players would open the South hand with one heart only. There is a lot of reason for this bid. If North has the right cards there will be a slam and a four-heart opening will toss that slam out the window.

On the other hand, South has no defense against spades. This time if he opens with one heart West will double for takeout and East will go to four spades if he has it. Furthermore, he will have no trouble making that contract. All he has to do is to draw trumps and take the diamond finesse.

The four opening effectively shuts East and West out of the bidding. In addition it will produce a really big swing for North and South unless East and West know how to get full value out of their trick-taking cards.

If West takes his ace and king of spades he will have no way to get more than one diamond trick and not only will South have taken away the East-West spade game but he will have made a game of his own.

Proper use of signals will allow East and West to save something from the wreck and pick up 50 points for a one-trick set. East must drop his queen of spades under his partner's king.

This play cannot be read as a suit preference call for a diamond shift because if East wants a diamond shift he can get it by just playing a low spade. West is not going to shift to a club in any event.

Actually, the queen of spades play is a specific strength signal and tells West that East is sitting with the jack of spades in back of that queen. West leads the six of spades. East gains the lead and plays a diamond through South's king.

Koufax, Drysdale Getting Set

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
Sports Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Wayne (Doc) Anderson is not the usual run of baseball trainer. When the private Electra which transports the Los Angeles Dodgers lands at the airport bordering Sepulveda Boulevard, a limousine with chauffeur waits to transport Doc home.

It's only fitting that a guy who protects a million dollar investment should travel in style. Doc is responsible for the physical condition of those two pitching entrepreneurs, Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale, and will have a lot to do with when they're exactly ready to earn their collective salaries (paid, at Walter O'Malley's insistence, individually).

Of course, Doc doesn't make the kind of money himself that rates a limousine. He had the perspicacity to marry a pretty blonde who owns a redwood forest and the mills that go with it.

While Sandy and Don were holding out this spring, Doc muttered imprecations about this being his last year in baseball.

"When you sign a contract," he explained, "you automatically count on making $10,000 more. Now I don't know. I can make more money working for my wife."

This is an update version of Stengelese which translates that the presence of Koufax and Drysdale means a cinch World Series share; without them, there's no chance.

Doc has been a trainer for 19 years. Before that he was an aspiring second baseman in Boyle Heights, a dead-end section of Los Angeles. When he found out he couldn't hit a ball over the short 220-foot wall in right field, he went to the University of Washington and got a degree as a chiropractor, then went into muscle building—other people's, of course.

Before coming to the Dodgers, he was the trainer for the Cincinnati Reds and ministered such specimens as Ted Klus-

between you'n'me

zewski, the first baseman who was built like a Wagnerian diva with muscles.

"But Sandy Koufax," said Anderson, "has heavier muscles than any ballplayer I've ever worked on, including Klu and the rest of them. Don Drysdale has longer muscles than Sandy."

What is the significance of this to a trainer?

"A fellow with heavy muscles has to be rubbed more than a long, lean fellow."

All of which should indicate that Drysdale figures to be readier to help the Dodgers sooner than his pitching partner, especially since it was revealed that he had sneaked off to do some throwing on the sly at a junior college while the two posed as prospective movie stars.

"Sandy is a very hard, hard worker," Anderson shook his head, "and this is going to be in his favor. I believe Sandy can get ready faster than Don under normal conditions."

Anderson revealed that of the two, Drysdale was the better natural actor—a man whom Hollywood director John Ford regarded as a John Wayne type.

Both have fine business heads, which is why none of the Dodgers regarded their holdout lightly. With them in camp, the world champions returned to normalcy.

For Anderson, his busiest time of year is over.

"Spring training," he said, "is the toughest. The better shape you bring the fellows home, the easier your job will be the rest of the year."

"I prepare ballplayers a little differently. I don't believe in heat. I believe in warm stuff (ointments), rubbing and stretching."

But with a certain delicacy. There's gold in "them thar arms."

Olderman

GETTING THE TREATMENT—Having missed most of spring training, Don Drysdale takes treatment prescribed for sore muscles. When you miss as much time as Don, the conditioning process isn't easy. Drysdale and Sandy Koufax staged one of the bitterest holdouts in baseball history.

NEW TWIST—It appears that Doug Sanders has a new dance step. Actually, it's just his reaction after sinking another long putt.

By DAVE BURGIN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

AKRON, O.—(NEA)—The veteran on the long, exacting Professional Bowlers Association tour is a torn man.

It has been that way for three or four years now, and it seems to get worse every season.

"The struggle is this," said Harry Smith, who, at 36, hears himself announced as one of the old pros on the circuit. "We are the ones who have fought for years to get recognition for bowling as a decent sport, and now when we finally begin to see daylight, it's the kids who pick the plums.

Smith

"On one hand, it's great to see the PBA finally getting some space in the newspapers," Smith said. "On the other, the conditions of the game have changed so drastically—mostly to the benefit of the kids—that the guy who has been around awhile is left to wonder if it's all worth it."

"There may be more money and more tournaments today," Smith said, "but, believe me, it's 10 times tougher to win."

There is no war on the circuit between the young and the old. But you won't see a Mike McGrath, 19, and a Dave Davis, 23, playing pinocle in the alley lounge with Buzz Fazio and Harry Smith.

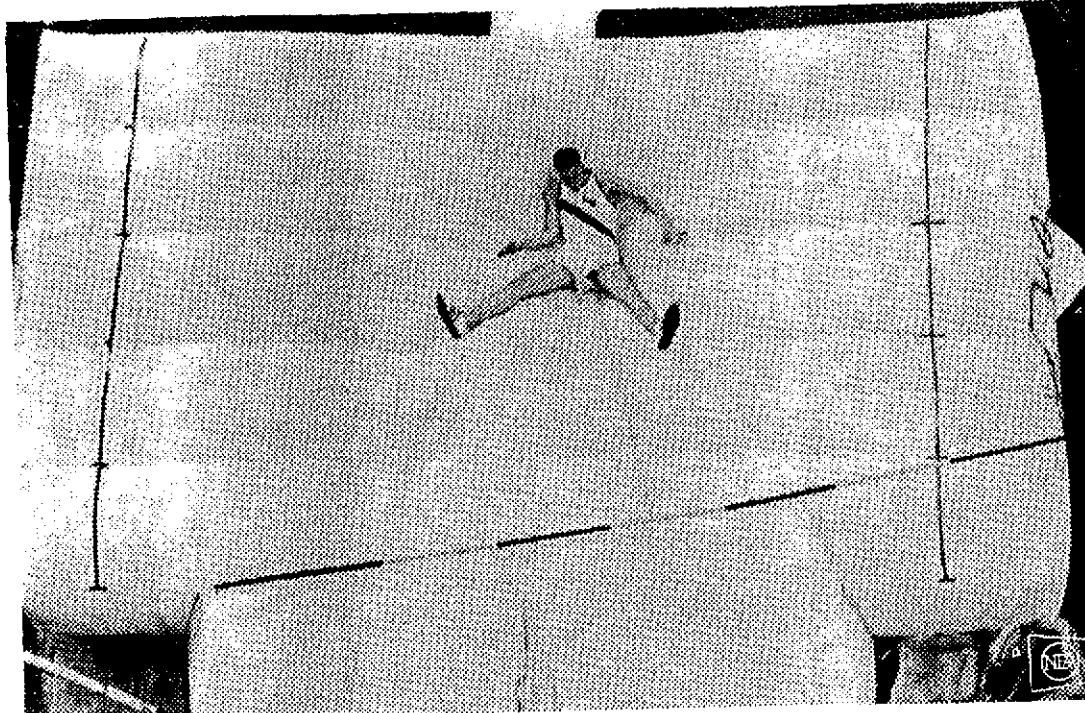

"The older fellows stay to themselves," Davis said. "They're hard to get to know."

Said McGrath, "I can understand why some, not all, of the veterans give us a rough time. It's like pro football—all of a sudden the young guys are getting all the money. I guess I'd resent it, too."

Smith said the veteran-rookie situation in bowling is more pronounced than the same relationship in other

SOFT LANDING—Central Michigan University has the newest in pole vault landing pits. The pit is really an air-filled plastic container nicknamed "Cloud 9." The cushion, when inflated, weighs 150 pounds. It has a valve and fan (top) which allows air to escape when the vaulter lands. It draws in air as the vaulter climbs out of the pit.

professional sports because the changes in conditions in bowling have made experience virtually meaningless.

"In golf," Smith said, "conditions may improve from year to year but they don't change so fast that Arnold Palmer gets buried by a bunch of 20-year-olds."

"Look what's happened to Don Carter," he said. "Three years ago they were calling him 'Mr. Bowling.' It isn't that way now. Carter hasn't lost anything, necessarily, but he hasn't adjusted to condition changes."

Smith and Dick Weber, 37, last year's top money winner, in recent years have been the most consistent veterans on the tour. Otherwise, names like Davis, McGrath, Wayne Zahn (24), Dave Soutar (26), Sam Baca (25), Nelson Burton Jr. (23), Bill Hardwick (24) and Mike Limongello (22) increasingly are dominating the standings.

In the recent $100,000 Firestone Tournament of Champions here, Zahn beat Weber out of $25,000 in the playoffs. Davis finished third, Tom Harnisch (27) fourth and McGrath sixth.

"I learned to bowl when the pins were heavy. And lanes were not as good, may-in-be, but they were standard around the country," Smith said. "You had to learn how to make a ball work; you had to know the game inside and out."

"Nowadays, the pins are so light and the lanes so slick that all a kid has to do is develop a decent stroke, throw a nice, easy light ball and aim for the pocket."

"The veterans," Smith said, "must start making this adjustment or get off the tour. Me? I've just been lucky. The more kids that come up, the tougher it gets."

McGrath and Davis, lefthanders with fluid motions and the advantage of throwing down the less-grooved left side, agree with Smith that pro bowling is getting to be a younger man's game.

"I know a lot of young guys," Davis said, "who with a little practice could get on the tour easily. But Smith has nothing on the young guys already on the tour—we don't want any more kids on it either."

Amos Hopes for Clay Rematch

By DAVE BURGIN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

MEDINA, Ohio (NEA) When Pete Rademacher and then Amos Johnson came to Medina, of all places, 8,000 townsfolk wondered if their prize-winning real estate developer, Ed Mears, was helping the underworld relocate.

Why, they asked, was a fine, upstanding man like Mears bringing in boxing people?

It didn't matter much that Rademacher was a college man and considered clean during his boxing career, or that Johnson spent six years in the Marine Corps and once whipped Cassius Clay.

Boxing was a overrun by bad money and big-mouths and a clean-cut community like Medina was, at best, skeptical.

But "things change," Ed Mears said, "even in a small town."

Now Rademacher, once employed by Mears, is a deacon in the Episcopal church and people in Medina say he probably could be elected mayor if he wanted to give up a lucrative job selling sports equipment.

And Johnson, 27, a heavy-weight who argues that he is good enough to be world champion, is nearly as popular as Medina's No. 1 citizen, Ohio's Lieutenant Governor John Brown.

"This town's full of boxing fans now," said a cop, lounging in his patrol car parked on the town square, "but only when it comes to Amos Johnson."

"Here's a guy loaded with talent and he can't get a chance to prove it. Always knew people who run boxing are sick. It's a shame for Amos," the cop said.

People in Medina don't grow up learning that a man's talents will deter his chances for advancement. They believe in Amos Johnson, and boxing's old story of the guy who is too good to get a decent fight makes the subject a bitter one in a Medina barber shop.

"Why does it have to be this way?" said Ed Mears, who is Johnson's employer, adviser and manager. "I guess maybe that's being naive."

"I always wanted to get into boxing—don't ask me why—and I figured what I wanted and what boxing could use more of was an honest, clean-living, hard-working kid who loved the sport."

"Well's that just what Amos is," Mears said, "and now I can't even get him a fight with a bum, let alone a ranked heavyweight."

"Maybe I should have Amos go out and mug an old lady or slug a cop. No. Lack of publicity is not the worst problem. The problem is that the word is out in boxing that Amos is too tough, too risky for their careers," Mears continued.

"I am willing to pay. I have offered Liston, Chuvalo, Machen, Frazier, Alongi and Doug Jones twice what they're worth, but they just don't want to fight Amos."

Johnson's pro record is 21-2-1. He clobbered the two men he lost to—Billy Joiner and Chip Johnson—in return matches. The draw was against European champion Karl Mildenberger in Berlin.

Johnson's most notable pro accomplishment was a decision last October over then fourth-ranked Henry Cooper.

"We could have easily taken Cooper out," Mears said. "But we figured we'd better not because it might scare everybody back in the States. Amos decked Cooper twice... with body punches." Johnson, from Oakland, Calif., is 6-1 and weighs 197. A converted southpaw, his best shot is a left hook. He is fast, aggressive and likes to fight inside.

"So I decked him"

Before leaving for the Cooper fight, Johnson went to Toronto as George Chuvalo's sparring partner prior to Chuvalo's fight with Ernie Terrell.

"They bill Chuvalo as never having been knocked down," Johnson said. "I guess I changed that reputation."

"He started butting me and this made me mad. So I dropped him. Then they threw me out of camp."

Said Mears, "I told Amos before he went up there to play it cool and leave Chuvalo alone."

Johnson decided on Clay when they were amateurs fighting in the U.S. Pan-American team trials. It's Clay's only loss. "I beat him pretty good," said Johnson, who went on to win the Pan-Am Games Gold Medal.

After that Johnson got out of the Marines and turned pro. He was fighting little and eating less. A year later, about the time Clay was winning an Olympic Gold Medal, Johnson was back in the Marine Corps.

"Turning pro too soon is where I made my mistake," Johnson said. "There's no reason why I couldn't have won Clay's medal, which might have helped my career some."

Until Mears can find him another fight, Johnson will continue morning workouts in a converted garage on the outskirts of Medina. Then in the afternoons Johnson does odd jobs for Mears and townspeople.

He carries his equipment, a lawnmower or a shovel, in the trunk of his car, a shiny new Cadillac Mears leased for him as a reward for beating Cooper. Johnson will drive up in his Cadillac, take out his shovel and start to work.

"I don't like it but I gotta eat," he said.

Parade Opens FFA Rodeo Weekend Friday

The Hope High School Band led the parade which formally opened the FFA Rodeo here yesterday afternoon.

Another feature of the parade was the Arkla Village surrey driven by Sam Cummings, left and his passenger is Carroll Lambert, right. In the back are some of the women in long dresses, in observance of Old Time Days.

Black Bear Up Tree at Residence Here

A Black Bear was discovered up a tree at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Woods, Highway 29 north just beyond the Hope City limits. Although nobody has been too close, estimates place the animal at about 400 pounds. Several years ago the Game and Fish Commission released several bears in Arkansas and from time to time one comes to town just as this one did.

China Angrily Denounces Indonesians

By T. JEFF WILLIAMS
JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Red China today angrily denounced the sacking of its Jakarta embassy and likened the 2,000 Indonesian Chinese rioters to "Hitlerite hordes."

China handed a protest note to Indonesian Ambassador Djawoto in Peking, the official New China News Agency said in Tokyo. The note charged that Chinese Embassy staff member Chao Hsiao-shou was shot in the chest and seriously wounded during the attack Friday, the news agency said.

The protest also charged that First Secretary Lu Tzu-po and four other Chinese officials were beaten up and injured as the attackers rampaged through the embassy compound, smashing windows and burning furniture and papers.

More than a dozen embassy staff members were seen this morning at Jakarta International Airport, reportedly preparing to board a flight to Bangkok, Thailand. Telephone calls to the embassy brought no answer.

An editorial in the official Peking People's Daily said the raid "by Indonesian right-wing reactionary forces" showed that "they intend to push the diplomatic relations between the two countries to a rupture."

"The Indonesian right-wing reactionary forces, guilty of perverted and lawless actions at home, have now cast to the winds the rudimentary principles of international law," the editorial said, and added: "Only the Hitlerite hordes were capable of such behavior."

Last Minute Dash to File Income Tax

By GAYLORU SHAW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rodolfo Rodriguez licked a stamp, placed it on the envelope and took his place in the line at the letter drop.

"Nine minutes to spare," he smiled as his 1965 income tax return disappeared into the slot.

Rodriguez and his wife, Delita, drove 12 miles from their suburban Greenbelt, Md., home to the main Washington post office Friday night, joining millions of other Americans in the annual April 15 dash to post office Friday night, joining millions of other Americans in the annual April 15 dash to post offices to beat the midnight deadline for filing their federal tax returns.

Rodriguez filled out his return in the post office lobby. About 100 other persons were working feverishly, doing the same as midnight neared. They leaned against walls or queued up for writing space at counters.

"Don't bother me. Don't you know what time it is?" one man said with a look of exasperation when a reporter asked why he had waited until the last minute to complete his return.

Rodriguez shrugged when asked the same question. "I'm a professional procrastinator," he said.

This was the first time he had waited so late and he said it would be the last.

"I don't want to go through this again," he said as he stuffed his checkbook in his pocket and headed for his car — parked blocks away in one of the worst traffic jams of the year in Washington.

A woman, wearing house shoes and her hair in curlers, followed her husband up the post office steps at 11:55 p.m. Her signature was needed on the tax return that would never beat the deadline.

Twenty-five postal employees, leather bags slung over their shoulders bearing signs "Income tax returns," took up positions along the curbs and in the middle of the streets near the post office four hours before midnight, grabbing envelopes thrust from windows of passing cars.

This procedure saved harried motorists the nerve-fraying task of trying to find a parking place.

One postal employee, Benjamin Licodo, estimated he gathered in 500 returns an hour from his spot on the street.

Ministers in Agreement

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Talks between ministers of the South Arabian government and anti-British rebels on the future of the South Arabian Federation have ended in Beirut with strong indications of a growing split in the terrorist movement in South Arabia.

A statement issued Monday by the ministers said agreement was reached on several points in the complex political situation of the federation, which is due for independence from Britain in 1968.

U.S. Pleads to States to Help Fight Inflation

By CARL F. LEUBSDORF
WASHINGTON (AP) — An administration appeal to the 50 states to stem inflationary pressures by deferring unnecessary spending for construction projects is bringing little favorable reaction.

Initial responses from a half dozen governors were that their states could ill afford to delay spending plans to meet critical state needs. Only one of a first 10 to reply — Indiana's Roger D. Branigin — indicated he would try to comply.

The request to hold down unnecessary spending came in a letter sent earlier this week by Farris Bryant, the former Florida governor who took over recently as director of the Office of Emergency Planning. OEP operates as a liaison with state governors besides supervising planning of the nation's nonmilitary defenses.

Bryant wrote the governors: "The President now asks that you review state and local expenditures in order to defer as much new construction, capital plant investment and equipment purchases as possible."

Officials said this was in line with appeals to businessmen to review investment plans, and to housewives to buy cheaper goods.

Such an appeal is "unrealistic," asserted Nebraska's Democratic Gov. Frank Morrison. He said Nebraska "has been cooperating in anti-inflation for many years" with subpar building programs and low state government salaries.

Protest Riots Revived in Viet Nam Streets

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — About 3,000 demonstrators took to the streets of Da Nang today and demanded that Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's military government give way to civilian rule.

One speaker burned a copy of the government's decree promising general elections in three to five months. Many of the marchers were civilian government employees.

The noisy rally and march followed by a day statement by Buddhist leaders in Saigon reaffirming support of the government's election promise. The Buddhists warned demonstrations would follow if the regime did not keep its promises.

The Saigon Buddhist statement made no reference to demands, voiced in the north, that Ky resign immediately and a transitional government take over until elections are held.

The demands were made by two persistent critics of the Ky junta, Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanr Thi, and Mayor Nguyen Van Man of Da Nang.

A spokesman for the Saigon Students' Union announced the union's members would go in a 48-hour hunger strike to protest a Buddhist monk's accusation that student leaders had accepted a huge bribe in return for government support. The union usually has 200 to 300 active members.

In Hanoi, the North Vietnamese Communist newspaper Nhan Dan today denounced one of the moderate Buddhist leaders as "a U.S. agent under a monk's cowl." He is Thich Tam Chau, who has called for a non-violent struggle against Ky's government but has made it clear that to be anti-government does not mean being anti-American.

The paper charged Tam Chau was playing a double game in the current political crisis by using the Buddhist movement to put pressure on the government while also helping the government suppress the mass movement against it.

Teacher Has Great Amount of Influence and Guidance Second Only to the Parents

By MARY ANITA LASETER

April is Teaching Career Month, and we are reminded that a teaching career is probably second only to that of a parent in the influence and guidance of young people. It is a noble calling, and the impact of those in this profession is felt by people everywhere, for it is the children of today who are the citizens of tomorrow and these lives are molded, to a great extent, by their teachers.

Group Has Taylor as Its Chairman

NEW YORK (AP) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor has agreed to become honorary chairman of the American Friends of Viet Nam.

The organization announced Monday that Taylor, special adviser to President Johnson and former ambassador to South Viet Nam, will serve jointly with Henry Cabot Lodge, the current ambassador.

Dr. Wesley Fishel is chairman of the American Friends of Viet Nam, a 10-year-old effort to promote understanding between the peoples of the United States and South Viet Nam.
